Integral Systems Introduces New i-Excellerator Suite for Talent Management

CHICAGO (Oct. 10, 2007) – As the need to orient new employees, develop their skills and enhance a company’s leadership team has moved from a tactical imperative to a strategic objective, Integral Systems, a leading provider of human resources products and services is introducing i-Excellerator, a full suite of talent management products that can be integrated with basic functions or contracted as a stand-alone suite.

i-Excellerator is the first new product offering resulting from Integral’s acquisition of TIP Interactive, to be completed later this month.

“We’re very excited to bring i-Excellerator to market as part of Integral Systems,” said Richard Klein, TIP Interactive CEO who will serve as Integral’s vice president of business development. “Our suite of Talent Management products is the culmination of working with a wide variety of Fortune 500 companies. We are very excited about being able to offer these best practices and lessons learned to Integral’s client base.”

i-Excellerator can be used to manage employee orientation, competency development and performance management, leadership development, sales development and an organization’s e-learning needs. With real-time user tracking, multiple reporting options and report summary graphs and charts, the system’s impact is easily measurable.
